Case No. 4:21-cv-01055-KAW

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO STRIKE CLASS ALLEGATIONS

Re: Dkt. No. 15

12
13 On April 19, 2021, Defendant Credit.com, Inc. filed a motion to strike Plaintiff Angela 14 Buell's class allegations on the grounds that the recent United States Supreme Court decision in 15 Barr v. American Association of Political Consultants, Inc., 140 S. Ct. 2335 (2020) ("AAPC"), 16 renders the robocall restriction unconstitutional for the five-year period preceding the decision, 17 thereby significantly narrowing the putative class period.

18 Upon review of the moving papers, the Court finds this matter suitable for resolution 19 without oral argument pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-1(b), and, for the reasons set forth below, 20 DENIES Defendant's motion to strike.

21 I. BACKGROUND

22 On February 11, 2021, Plaintiff Angela Buell filed a class action complaint against 23 Defendant Credit.com, Inc., alleging that Defendant violated the Telephone Consumer Protection 24 Act ("TCPA"), 47 U.S.C. § 227, by making unsolicited, pre-recorded telemarketing calls.
25 (Compl., Dkt. No. 1 at 1.) Defendant provides credit counseling services. (Compl. ¶ 16.)

26 Plaintiff has been on the National Do Not Call Registry since April 2013, and alleges that 27 Defendant called her personal cell phone three times in February 2021 and delivered three 28 identical pre-recorded voicemails. (Compl. ¶¶ 26-36.) Plaintiff asserts that she did not consent to 1 receive pre-recorded or telemarketing calls and was not seeking services from Defendant or 2 Defendant's partners. (Compl. ¶¶ 37-38.) Plaintiff seeks class certification pursuant to Federal 3 Rules of Civil Procedure 23(b)(2) and 23(b)(3) of two Classes: the Pre-recorded No Consent Class

4 and the Do Not Call Registry Class. (Compl. ¶ 41.) Only the putative Pre-recorded No Consent
5 Class, defined below, is the subject of Defendant's motion:

6 Pre-recorded No Consent Class: All persons in the United States
7 who from four years prior to the filing of this action through trial (1) 8 Defendant (or an agent acting on behalf of Defendant) called (2) using 9 a pre-recorded voice message, and (3) for whom the Defendant claim 10 (a) they obtained prior express written consent in the same manner as 11 Defendant claims they supposedly obtained prior express written 12 consent to call Plaintiff, or (b) they obtained the person's number in 13 the same manner as Defendant obtained Plaintiff's number.

14 Id.

15 On April 19, 2021, Defendant filed a motion to strike the class allegations that fall within 16 the period that the TCPA included a government-debt exception. (Def.'s Mot., Dkt. No. 15 at 1.)
17 On May 3, 2021, Plaintiff filed an opposition. (Pl.'s Opp'n, Dkt. No. 17.) On May 10, 2021, 18 Defendant filed a reply. (Def.'s Reply, Dkt. No. 20.)

19 II. LEGAL STANDARD

20 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(f) provides that, on its own or on motion made by a 21 party, a "court may strike from a pleading an insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, 22 impertinent, or scandalous matter." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). "The function of a Rule 12(f) motion to 23 strike is to avoid the expenditure of time and money that must arise from litigating spurious issues 24 by dispensing with those issues prior to trial...." Whittlestone, Inc. v. Handi-Craft Co., 618 F.3d 25 970, 973 (9th Cir. 2010).

26 Using Rule 12(f) as a vehicle for resolving the propriety of class claims, pursuant to Rule 27 23, is generally disfavored, and a motion to strike should only be granted where the allegations in 28 question are "(1) an insufficient defense; (2) redundant; (3) immaterial; (4) impertinent; or (5) scandalous." Whittlestone, Inc., 618 F.3d at 973-74 (9th Cir. 2010).

III. DISCUSSION

Defendant moves to strike the class allegation of the "Pre-recorded No Consent Class" on the grounds that the class definition is overbroad in light of the United States Supreme Court’s ruling in Barr v. American Association of Political Consultants, Inc., 140 S. Ct. 2335 (2020) (“AAPC”). (Def.’s Mot. at 4.) In AAPC, the Supreme Court held that the government-debt exception to the robocall restriction, enacted in November 2015, violated the First Amendment as a content-based restriction on speech. 140 S. Ct. at 2343. As a result of the finding in AAPC, Defendant is asking this Court to narrow the Pre-recorded No Consent class period to the period beginning on July 6, 2020, the date of decision, and continuing through trial. (Def.’s Mot. at 4.)

A. 1991 Telephone Consumer Protection Act (“TCPA”)

The 1991 Telephone Consumer Protection Act (“TCPA”) amended the 1934 Communications Act by adding a robocall restriction. AAPC, 140 S. Ct. at 2344, 2352. The TCPA’s robocall restriction, 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A)(iii), imposed various restrictions on the use of automated telephone equipment to protect consumers from the growing number of telemarketers using the equipment to automatically dial telephone numbers and deliver prerecorded or artificial voice messages. AAPC, 140 S. Ct. at 2344. In 2015, the Bipartisan Budget Act amended the robocall restriction to include an exception permitting robocalls by government-debt collectors. 140 S. Ct. at 2344-45. Thus, the TCPA’s robocall restriction prohibited:

[A]ny call (other than a call made for emergency purposes or made with the prior express consent of the called party) using any automatic telephone dialing system or an artificial or prerecorded voice--

(iii) to any telephone number assigned to a paging service, cellular telephone service, specialized mobile radio service, or other radio common carrier service, or any service for which the party is charged for the call, unless such call is made solely to collect a debt owed to or guaranteed by the United States.

47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A)(iii) (emphasis added).

B. AAPC and the constitutionality of the Government-Debt Exception

In 2020, five years after the government-debt exception was enacted, the United States Supreme Court, in AAPC, addressed whether the government-debt exception constituted a content-based speech regulation in violation of the First Amendment. 140 S. Ct. at 2345.

111

1 In AAPC, the American Association of Political Consultants and three other organizations 2 involved in the political process believed their outreach to citizens would be more efficient and 3 effective if they could make robocalls to cellular telephones. 140 S. Ct. at 2345. Since the 4 organizations were prohibited from placing robocalls because they were not government-debt 5 collectors, they filed an action for declaratory judgment against the U.S. Attorney General and the 6 Federal Communications Commission alleging that § 227(b)(1)(A)(iii) violated the First 7 Amendment. Id.

8 The U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina found that the 9 government-debt exception was a content-based restriction on speech, thereby triggering strict 10 scrutiny. 140 S. Ct. at 2345. The district court held that the statute survived strict scrutiny because 11 of the Government's interest in collecting debt. Id. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth 12 Circuit vacated the judgment, disagreeing with the district court that the law could survive strict 13 scrutiny. 140 S. Ct. at 2345. The Fourth Circuit found the government-debt exception 14 unconstitutional, and severed it from the TCPA's general robocall restriction. Id. The Supreme 15 Court then granted certiorari. Id. at 2346.

16 The issue before the Supreme Court was whether the robocall restriction with the 17 government-debt exception was unconstitutional, and if so, whether to invalidate the entire 1991 18 robocall restriction, or invalidate and sever the exception from the rest of the statute. 140 S. Ct. at 19 2346, 2348. First, and without a majority opinion, six members of the Supreme Court found that 20 the exception was a content-based restriction in violation of the First Amendment because it 21 favored debt-collection speech over political speech. Id. at 2343, 2346 (Kavanaugh, J.); Id. at 2357 22 (Sotomayor, J., concurring in judgment); Id. at 2363 (Gorsuch, J., concurring in judgment in part 23 and dissenting in part).

24 i. Severability

25 Having found the government-debt exception unconstitutional, the Supreme Court turned 26 to whether the offending provision could be severed from the statute. Generally, the inclusion of a 27 severability clause "mak[es] clear that the unconstitutionality of one provision does not affect the 28 rest of the law." AAPC, 140 S. Ct. at 2349. The Supreme Court determined that the express

1 severability clause included in the 1934 Communications Act extended to § 227 required that the 2 government-debt exception be severed from the general robocall restriction so long as “the 3 remainder of the statute is ‘capable of functioning independently’ and thus would be ‘fully 4 operative’ as a law.” Id. at 2352 (quoting Seila Law LLC v. Consumer Fin. Prot. Bureau, 140 S.
5 Ct. 2183, 2209 (2020)). Ultimately, a plurality (seven Members of the Court) determined that 6 severability was appropriate because the remainder of the general robocall restriction was capable 7 of being fully operative as a law, because it had functioned independently in the years prior to the 8 addition of the government-debt exception. Id. at 2343-44, 2353.

9 Since the government-debt exception was a relatively narrow exception to the broad 10 robocall restriction, and severing it would not raise any other constitutional problems, the same 11 plurality determined that severance cured the unequal treatment under the First Amendment, 12 thereby preserving the robocall restriction. Id. at 2343-44, 2355. In closing the severability 13 discussion, Justice Kavanaugh, joined by Chief Justice Roberts and Justice Alito, explicitly 14 absolved government-debt collectors of liability for robocalls made during that time, but also 15 stated that liability would still attach for anyone who violated the general robocall restriction 16 between 2015 and 2020. Id. at 2355 n.12 (“[O]ur decision today does not negate the liability of 17 parties who made robocalls covered by the robocall restriction.”) Since a majority did not sign on 18 to Judge Kavanaugh’s entire opinion, there is disagreement among district courts as to whether 19 footnote 12 is binding precedent or merely persuasive.

20 ii. Whether severance is retroactive or prospective

21 Defendant argues that the inclusion of the unconstitutional government-debt exception 22 renders the entire robocall restriction unconstitutional from its amendment in 2015 until the 23 Supreme Court severed the exception in 2020. (Def.’s Mot. at 6; Def.’s Reply at 2.) As a result, 24 Defendant contends that the general robocall exception can only be enforced prospectively. Ids.

25 Defendant argues that footnote 12’s pronouncement that it could still be held liable for 26 robocalls made between 2015 and 2020 is dictum, because “the statement was joined by only three 27 justices, was unnecessary to support the court’s holding, was not based on the facts of the case at 28 hand, and addressed an issue not presented to the Court.” (Def.’s Reply at 7.) Specifically,

1 Defendant asserts that only the three justices in the plurality opinion supported the severability 2 analysis, and thus the footnote, while four Justices concurred in judgment only. (Def.’s Reply at 3 7.) In support of its position, Defendant relies on three district courts that treated the footnote as 4 non-binding dicta. Creasy v. Charter Commc’ns, Inc., 489 F. Supp. 3d 499, 503 (E.D. La. 2020)
5 (characterizing the footnote as “passing Supreme Court dicta of no precedential force”); 6 Lindenbaum v. Realgy, LLC, 497 F. Supp. 3d 290, 295 (2020) (finding the footnote was endorsed 7 by only the three Justices in the plurality opinion); Hussain v. Sullivan Buick-Cadillac-GMC
8 Truck, Inc., No. 5:20-cv-38-Oc-30PRL, 2020 WL 7346536, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 11, 2020)
9 (agreeing with the analysis in Creasy and Lindenbaum).

10 In opposition, Plaintiff argues that, despite footnote 12 being contained in the three-Justice 11 plurality opinion, seven Justices concurred in the severability discussion rendering the footnote 12 binding. (Pl.’s Opp’n at 3.) The undersigned agrees. Indeed, Justices Sotomayor and Breyer 13 (joined by Justices Ginsburg and Kagan), concurred with Justice Kavanaugh’s severability 14 conclusion, which left the longstanding robocall restriction intact. 140 S. Ct. at 2357 (Sotomayor, 15 J., concurring in judgment); Id. at 2363 (Breyer, J., concurring in judgment with respect to 16 severability and dissenting in part) (“I respectfully concur in the judgment with respect to 17 severability and dissent in part [finding the exception does not violate the First Amendment.”).
18 The undersigned is persuaded by the district court’s analysis in McCurley v. Royal Sea Cruises, 19 Inc., No. 17-cv-00986-BAS-AGS, 2021 WL 288164, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2021), where the 20 court held that footnote 12 was not dicta because it was joined by six other Justices. (See Pl.’s 21 Opp’n at 6.) The undersigned notes that only Justices Gorsuch and Thomas dissented on the issue 22 of severability. 140 S. Ct. at 2365-66 (Gorsuch, J., concurring in judgment in part and dissenting 23 in part).

24 Furthermore, as the McCurley court noted, Justices Breyer, Ginsburg, and Kagan “would 25 not have held the 2015 amendment to be unconstitutional at all, and they certainly agreed 26 Defendant could be held liable.” McCurley, 2021 WL 288164, at *2. The latter point holds true in 27 the instant case. Here, the alleged robocalls were not protected by the government-debt exception, 28 and, at the very least, six Justices—Chief Justice Roberts, and Justices Kavanaugh, Alito, Breyer,

1 Ginsburg, and Kagan—clearly agreed that Defendant could still be held liable for all robocalls
2 made after the enactment of the unconstitutional exception. See 140 S. Ct. 2355 n.12 (Kavanaugh, 3 J.); Id. at 2357-63 (Breyer, J., concurring in judgment with respect to severability and dissenting in 4 part).

5 Finally, the Court is not persuaded by Defendant’s reliance on Creasy, 489 F. Supp. 3d at 6 507, where the district court reasoned that the exception fundamentally altered the entire statute 7 and required that it be enforced prospectively. (See Def.’s Mot. at 6.) In Creasy, the court held 8 that the entire robocall restriction was void because “it itself was repugnant to the Constitution 9 before the Supreme Court restored it to constitutional health in AAPC.” 489 F. Supp. 3d at 507 10 (emphasis in original). The undersigned, however, is unpersuaded by this rationale because the 11 majority of sitting justices found it proper “to sever the 2015 government-debt exception and leave 12 in place the longstanding robocall restriction.” AAPC, 140 S. Ct. at 2355. Defendant’s reliance on 13 Hussain, 2020 WL 7346536, at *3, is similarly misplaced. (Def.’s Mot. at 7.) In that case, the 14 court found that “[t]he 2015 amendment, adding the government-debt exception, changed an 15 otherwise valid statute to an unconstitutional content-based restriction.” Hussain, 2020 WL 16 7346536, at *3 (citing AAPC, 140 S. Ct. at 2347-48.) The Hussain court’s determination would be 17 persuasive if the Supreme Court had struck down the entire 1991 robocall restriction. Instead, the 18 Supreme Court only invalidated the 2015 government-debt exception. AAPC, 140 S. Ct. at 2348, 19 2355.

20 Accordingly, the Court finds that the TCPA’s general robocall restriction remained intact 21 from 1991 onward, which includes the entire putative class period, and requires that the pending 22 motion to strike be denied.

23 IV. CONCLUSION

24 For the reasons set forth above, Defendant’s motion to strike is DENIED. Defendant shall 25 file an answer within 14 days of this order.

26 IT IS SO ORDERED.
